Grey Bryan is a partner and Chair of the International Practice Group. He divides his time between the Washington, DC and Century City offices. Previously, Grey established and was partner-in-charge, from January 1987 to April 1990, of the Firm's Tokyo office.

Grey counsels US and non-US clients involved in international business disputes and transactions. His litigation practice emphasizes representing clients before US agencies that regulate international trade and business, particularly on economic sanctions, Foreign Corrupt Practices Act, export controls and customs matters. Grey also represents clients before US and non-US agencies in connection with trade remedy proceedings such as antidumping, countervailing duty and escape clause proceedings, before panels established pursuant to international agreements such as the WTO and NAFTA and before arbitral tribunals organized under the rules of various international commercial arbitration institutions.

Illustrative Professional Experience

- Represented both US and non-US clients in connection with US and foreign country trade remedy proceedings, such as antidumping, countervailing duty, and escape clause investigations, in the steel, non-ferrous metal, textile, chemical, industrial equipment, electronics, automotive, and agricultural industries
- Represented major US and non-US multinational corporations with respect to compliance with US customs, economic sanctions, Foreign Corrupt Practices Act and export control laws, both in the context of transactions and with respect to their operations
- Represented major US multinational corporations in designing and implementing strategies to eliminate barriers to trade in global markets
- Represented foreign governments in connection with US proceedings alleging unfair practices and violations of treaty obligations
