Tracie Ingrasin is an experienced lawyer specializing in the investment funds sector and corporate transactions. Her clients are diverse and widespread, though she frequently represents fund sponsors, asset managers, and institutional investors.

Tracie represents fund sponsors in connection with forming, structuring, and operating domestic and offshore buyout funds, venture capital funds, real estate funds, infrastructure funds, secondary funds, and hedge funds targeting US, European, and emerging markets. Tracie represents institutional investors in connection with investments in various types of alternative asset classes both domestically and internationally.

In addition, Tracie has significant experience representing clients in secondary acquisitions and sales of partnership and direct interests, including synthetic secondary transactions. She has completed many secondary transactions during her career including a recent US $1 billion sell-side representation.

She also regularly assists clients with issues relating to the Securities Act, the Investment Company Act, and the Investment Advisers Act.

Tracie actively and resourcefully guides her clients through high-stakes transactions with a keen attention to detail and a strategic vision that helps them achieve their business goals.
