Samantha Galván is a litigation associate in O'Melveny's Los Angeles office, where she represents a broad range of clients in various matters including internal investigations, complex civil litigation, and consumer class actions. Her experience includes cases involving claims of false advertising, unfair competition, and securities law violations.

Samantha also maintains an active pro bono practice, assisting domestic violence survivors with declarations for restraining order petitions and recently working with an O'Melveny team to file an amicus brief in the US Supreme Court in support of a criminal defendant on death row.

During her time at O'Melveny, Samantha was seconded to Airbnb where she worked with the US Risk & Regulatory team on various matters related to data sharing obligations and antitrust litigation.

Samantha currently serves as co-chair of O'Melveny's Latinx Attorneys employee network, which facilitates mentoring, community outreach, and career-building activities for Latinx attorneys firmwide.
