Kelsey M. Larson focuses her practice on class actions brought under California's unfair competition, false advertising, and consumer protection statutes, and complex commercial and product liability litigation. She represents companies across the pharmaceutical, consumer electronics, consumer health products, and food and beverage industries.

While being detail oriented and efficient, Kelsey provides counsel to her clients by maintaining a broad perspective on the issues that impact their matters so that she can help them achieve their goals.

Experience

- Representation of a multinational semiconductor company in obtaining dismissals of consumer class action related to an alleged security vulnerability
