Daily Journal Notes O'Melveny's Representation of AKUA in Series Seed Financing

May 30, 2017

O'Melveny's representation of AKUA, an IoT innovator leading the data-driven transformation of the global supply chain, in its US$3 million series seed financing was noted in the May 25, 2017, edition of Daily Journal's "Dealmakers" column. The publication notes that the Silicon Valley-based O'Melveny team was led by partners Warren T. Lazarow and Brian Covotta, and included counsel Tim Hagen and associate Annie Woodworth.

Lazarow, who is firmwide co-chair of O'Melveny's Transactions Department, is recognized as one of the market's leading advisors to technology-focused companies and investors. Covotta advises growth-oriented technology and biotechnology companies on corporate and securities transactions. Hagen specializes in general corporate and business law, venture capital financings and private equity investments, mergers and acquisitions, cross-border transactions, and general corporate matters. Woodworth is a member of O'Melveny's transactions group.
