Raj to Discuss Cyber Breaches at National Security Law Journal Symposium

April 12, 2017

O'Melveny partner Kiran Raj will moderate a panel at the National Security Law Journal's spring symposium, "Exploring Private Sector and Government Interactions Post-Cyber Breach: Insights, Impacts, and Approaches," on April 12, 2017, at George Mason University in Fairfax, VA. The panel will include attorneys specializing in cybersecurity, privacy, and national security law from the public and private sector.

Formerly the Department of Homeland Security's highest-ranking attorney focused on cybersecurity and technology, Washington, DC-based Raj draws on his extensive government and corporate experience to counsel clients on their most critical privacy and cybersecurity issues. Raj also serves as an adjunct professor at the Antonin Scalia Law School and is a faculty member of the recently created National Security Institute at Antonin Scalia Law School.
