Overview

Trade secret information constitutes a valuable—and vulnerable—assets for many companies. The misappropriation of trade secrets has become increasingly common in the context of a highly mobile workforce where the exchange of information can occur in an instant.

Whether taking measures to prevent the theft of critical secrets, investigating alleged thefts, or battling in court, trade secrets matters can be complex. Issues often cross the boundaries of employment, intellectual property, and criminal law. With award-winning practitioners in these and other critical areas, we field coordinated, comprehensive legal teams customized to our clients' individual needs. We approach our work with an eye toward trade secret protection and preventing litigation. When litigation is necessary, we have an outstanding track record of success.
