Overview

Trade secret information constitutes a valuable—and vulnerable—assets for many companies. The misappropriation of trade secrets has become increasingly common in the context of a highly mobile workforce where the exchange of information can occur in an instant.

Clients facing sensitive investigations of alleged thefts or litigation turn to O'Melveny's interdisciplinary team, which brings together leading lawyers in criminal, intellectual property, and employment law to cover every angle.

We litigate complex, high-profile cases involving allegations of civil and criminal misappropriation of technical and business trade secrets and other confidential and proprietary information in state and federal courts nationwide, and guide clients through government investigations regarding criminal theft of trade secrets.
