Law360 recently announced its 2013 editorial advisory boards with three O'Melveny lawyers being selected. Century City partner Matthew Erramouspe has been asked to sit on Law360's Media & Entertainment editorial advisory board again this year, Los Angeles partner Richard Goetz has once again been selected for the publication's Insurance editorial advisory board, and Washington, DC counsel Dixie Noonan has been asked to sit on the publication's Banking editorial advisory board. According to Law360, the purpose of the editorial advisory boards is to gain feedback on the publication's coverage and to gain insight from those in the field on how best to shape future coverage.
