CENTURY CITY, CALIFORNIA -- March 30, 2016 -- O'Melveny & Myers LLP has selected associate Jeremy Tran as a member of the 2016 class of Pathfinders, a new program designed by the Leadership Council on Legal Diversity (LCLD) to train early-career attorneys in critical career development skills including leadership and network development. The program offers participants intensive in-person training, online experiential learning, and opportunities to network with peers and esteemed LCLD Fellows in small group gatherings. "We believe it's a program that can help catapult a person's career forward," said LCLD President Robert J. Grey, Jr.

Tran's participation in the program marks the continuation of O'Melveny's ongoing relationship with LCLD. "A number of our partners have participated in the LCLD Fellows program and have gained so much," said Mary Ellen Connerty, O'Melveny's Director of Diversity and Inclusion. "We're thrilled to now be a part of the new Pathfinder program for young lawyers and see this as a very exciting opportunity for Jeremy."

Tran is a litigator focusing on commercial civil litigation, with an emphasis on matters related to the entertainment, media, and sports industries.
